1. Personal Attributes. In addition to having a solid professional background, the incumbent should be able to work on his/her own, analysing available documentation and interpreting data. Effective oral communication skills, including persuasiveness and interpersonal sensitivity, are crucial to liaison with national authorities, governmental organisations and NGO representatives, and to advising groups and agencies. Thought is required to analyse information, develop recommendations for modifications and assist in the development of projects. Considerable professional judgement is needed for analysing survey reports and submitting co-ordinated comments and recommendations. The incumbent should be capable of initiative, critical thinking and judgement, as he/she identifies problems and requirements and proposes or analyses solutions. High work standards and self-motivation characterise professional behaviour at this level.

2. Managerial Responsibilities. Receives functional guidance from the Security Sector Reform Operations Officer. Has no immediate subordinates, but may be tasked with the management of duty-related projects. May represent Security Sector Reform Special Advisor at conferences and meetings and provide advice on his/her behalf at the highest levels.

3. Professional Contacts. The incumbent will have routine contact with division representatives up to Division Head/Coordinating Officer level, locally and in the Balkans JOA. The incumbent must be able to establish regular contacts also at Command Group, ministerial and international organisation level, locally and throughout the Crisis Response Operations (CROs), the Joint Force Commands and ACO. Frequent face-to-face, telephone and electronic interaction at all levels calls for well-developed oral communication and listening skills.

4. Contribution to Objectives. Provides advice crucial to developing global and local policies on transnational security issues. Provides advice on evaluating NATO engagement and operations in order to judge their value and identify best practice. Contributes to maintaining JFC HQ Naples' understanding and overview of transnational issues within the Balkans JOA.

5. Work Environment. Normal office environment. May be required to travel.

D. REMARKS. Attends training courses/seminars to maintain functional and professional competence in the field.
